RACHEL GOLD:

A new voice for the past

by Claire Levine

Rachel Gold has a clear memory of the moment she made the leap from folk music to old time and bluegrass.

"I was at a jam and someone sang Foggy Mountain Top." While she talks about that experience, you can almost hear the fireworks going off in her brain as she heard her first dose of high-octane mountain music that so perfectly fits her own charge-ahead personality.

That chance meeting with a Carter Family song set Rachel on the path that ultimately led to a sweetheart, a popular band and a role as a KBOO programmer. Rachel spoke to The Express about the journey from Philadelphia folk fan to leadership in the Portland bluegrass community.

Folk music: The urban path to bluegrass and old time music

For urban dwellers in the 70s, roots music generally meant American folk music – Pete Seeger and the Weavers, Bob Dylan and Peter Paul and Mary. And the Philadelphia townhouse where Rachel grew up was filled with the music of these and other contemporary folk musicians.

Rachel, who always liked to sing, found her way into a folk singing club in college, then after graduation learned "three guitar chords so I could accompany myself."

At first, compared to the melodies of folk music, Rachel thought, "bluegrass music was kind of crude." She also was drawn to vocals and harmony singing, and found no appeal in playing instrumental music. "Of course, that all changed," she reflects now.

After the Foggy Mountain Top encounter, she immersed herself in the Carter Family, then Jimmy Rogers and other early country performers. Ultimately, someone pointed her to Bill Monroe. Life would never be the same.

The real turning point was a jam on the famed Bluegrass Hill at the Northwest Folklife festival (Rachel had moved to Seattle for graduate school), which led to her joining a local band, the Pot Belly Boys. She later formed the Bristol Sisters, which she calls a "girl-power-inspired" ensemble in which she played six-string banjo.

By then, Rachel had realized that bluegrass and old time music contain "all the things I like about folk music – without the cheesiness.

"It's so simple, real honesty comes out. Even if the story in the song is outside my experience, I can hear the other person's truth in it. It becomes universal."

Wintergrass: Where great things happen

Wintergrass has made a big difference in many peoples' lives. So it's not surprising that Rachel's first meeting with Justin Auld would have been at Wintergrass 2000, where they jammed on Carter Family songs.

That summer, they met again at the Columbia Gorge Festival in Stevenson, Wash., where the chemistry – musical and otherwise – was undeniable. A year later, Rachel was living in Portland and the seeds of Whiskey Puppy were sown.

Whiskey Puppy is Rachel on guitar, Justin on banjo and Travis "Tater" Harrison on bass. Part bluegrass, part old-time, all high energy (one reviewer calls them "raucous," meaning it totally as a compliment), Whiskey Puppy is far from easy listening. It's the kind of music that commands hooting and stomping. And maybe, in the spirit of the band name, some imbibing.

The Traditional Country Music Association's magazine said, "Whiskey Puppy has maintained the sound of the Skillet Lickers and have as much fun as the old-timers did."

About the same time Rachel and Justin started performing together, Rachel also co-founded the Flat Mountain Girls, originally with Caroline Oakley and Lisa Marsicek, and later joined by Nann Allemann and Laura Quigley. Rachel played clawhammer, and all the musicians shared singing responsibilities. The old-time ensemble was notable for vocals that evoked visions of an Appalachian autumn.

The OBA holds board elections each April as individual terms expire. The Board of Directors invites you to join our monthly meetings. We welcome your visit and ideas, opinions and proposals. Or, just come to see what we're doing! We generally meet the second Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. The location is subject to change. Call us or email any board member for time, location and directions.

From the president

Cheers and thanks to you Oregon bluegrassers!

Not only was our annual meeting a great success at its new location in Happy Valley, it brought about a few changes – one of which is me writing to you all instead of Chip (never fear, he's staying on as a member at large). We had well over 50 folks and the jamming started at 10 a.m. and lasted well into the wee morning hours, making good use of both barns. We gained some new members and a renewal or two, but more importantly welcomed some new board members into the OBA family: Pat Connell, Sarah Ells, John Prunty and Christine Weinmeister all joined us as members at large. Their energy has already contributed greatly to the Bluegrass Express newsletter committee and beyond. Patty Spencer has agreed to Vice Presidency (no arm twisting necessary) and has been a major component in our acquiring some new and energetic members to the board. We've got some great momentum building with this new board energy. The enthusiasm about Pendarvis Farm should bode well for our 4th Annual Bluegrass and Old Time Picker's Fest, September 16-18. Mark your calendars if you haven't already, because it's going to be a great weekend to round off your festival summer!

Some of the great ideas we're working on are a Chick Rose commemorative issue. We need your photos and articles for this upcoming issue. All funds raised will go to the Chick Rose Commemorative Bluegrass Youth Program and Bluegrass Scholarship Fund. This is an account we will keep separate. We've already collected over $500 in generous donations, all of which are tax deductible. You can email stories and photos for the issue to Robyn Rawls at robynrawls@comcast.net and any donations to our P.O. Box. We'll soon have PayPal donations set up on our website. For any eligible donation, we'll promptly send you a receipt for tax purposes. These funds will jibe strongly with the direction I/we want to take the OBA toward more of an educational and workshop focus. As the Chick Rose fund grows, which it will, we'll establish a committee responsible for incoming and outgoing funds as well as structuring and planning the educational programs, workshops and scholarship distribution. Chick's legacy will live on. If you have more ideas or would like to help, reach out to us!

So, now it's tripping toward peak festival season. Get out there and support your local and not so local festivals. We can't thank you enough for all you do to help keep bluegrass alive. This year more than others, I've noticed how many more festivals the State of Washington has over our wonderful State of Oregon. I think we should do something about that because without your support more Oregon festivals will fall off of the map. In May, Patrick Connell started a great festival in North Portland with his Boise-Eliot Bluegrass Festival benefitting Port City Development. It included seven bands, jamming and beer for a good cause. Keep it coming, Oregon. If you hear of something new on the radar, don't hesitate to check it out! If you have festival notions or ideas, we're here to help with advertising and beyond. That being said, we're really working to enhance our own 4th Annual Bluegrass and Old Time Picker's Fest with workshops and more this year. The square dance was a hit last year (I should know, being the monkey in the middle). This year we'll be working in a band scramble and a bluegrass band or three or four as well. So remember September 16-18, and we'll see you at Pendarvis Farm in Happy Valley.

Keep those OBA Fun Meters on high until we see you again!

Cheers,
Colby

RACHEL GOLD: A new voice for the past

by Claire Levine

After seven years – “a really good run for any band” – Rachel decided two bands were too much. She left the Flats and dedicated herself to Whiskey Puppy, a great relationship and an intense day job.

Working, living, & Saturday mornings

Rachel works for the Kaiser Permanente Center for Health Research as an epidemiologist—public health researcher. She is studying ways health providers can make the best use of computer records for a healthier population.

She loves her work, but recognizes the need for balance. “I’m just glad to have the music to come home to – I feel so fortunate to have a musician as a partner.”

Once a month, Rachel and Justin are the program hosts for KBOO Radio’s Music from the True Vine. They volunteer hours of their time getting ready for the show; hosting for three hours each Saturday; arranging live on-air entertainment; and pitching contributions during pledge drive. But Rachel admits she got involved with KBOO for somewhat selfish motives.

She said, “It used to drive me crazy when the Saturday morning calendar reader would get my gig announcements wrong.” So she signed up to organize and read the calendar events.

When Dee Anne Nelson left the first-Saturday-of-the-month slot, she invited Rachel to take her place. “I was really scared, but excited,” Rachel said, and she turned to Justin and his broad, historical musical knowledge. “It’s a great opportunity to showcase both our tastes.”

Rachel appreciates time spent preparing for the show, as it gives her the rare opportunity just to listen to music – and select songs that would work well in the band. In fact, she has so little free time that she has created her own enforced time out, what she calls “Country Music Thursday.” That’s when she takes the bus rather than riding her bike to work for the specific purpose of listening to music on her iPod.

The Fun Puppies

Whiskey Puppy takes pride in the diversity of the music it performs – from old time string band songs of the 20s and 30s to straight ahead bluegrass, and of course, Rachel’s cowgirl yodels.

But the band is about a lot more than just the music. It’s a band with attitude

“I love going to jams. I love being involved in the community. I just love being part of this.”

– an attitude of good times. Rachel sums up what she likes about Whiskey Puppy: “We’re funny!” After all, this is the band that came up with the (sad but true) bumper sticker, “It takes a village to tune a banjo.”

The fans that pack Mississippi Pizza, the Alberta Street Pub, and the White Eagle agree that Whiskey Puppy is a lot of fun. They come for the jokes and bantering as much as the eclectic song selection.

The band’s got some adventures ahead of it. First, the release of their fourth CD, “Chewgrass,” in fall of 2011. Rachel expects to have it completed by the time they take off for a tour of The Netherlands (the second Puppies in Holland tour). Lucrative? Not exactly. “If we’re lucky it will pay for one of our plane tickets.” But a wonderful opportunity to connect with music fans around the world.

Rachel could have written the song, “Girls Just Want to Have Fun.” Her exuberance shines through in everything she mentions relating to bluegrass. “I love going to jams. I love being involved in the community. I just love being part of this.”

Rachel Gold lives life to the fullest—with the most possible fun.

“The OBA summed it up,” Rachel said. “When I do music, my fun meter is set on high.”

Rachel: On women in bluegrass

“Occasionally, when I’m in a jam where people don’t know me, some poor fool won’t offer me a guitar break. I let them know...don’t ever assume a woman with a guitar can’t take a lead.”

“I like it when women play with a gritty style, a little edgy. Sometimes women think they have to sound so sweet. Of course, male groups sometimes do that, too. There can be a lot of saccharine in bluegrass – that doesn’t resonate with me. I prefer honesty.”

“I love a co-ed band. It adds character, it adds energy, balance. Not too sweet, not too rowdy. They are more fun.”

On April 16, members of the Oregon Bluegrass Association showed the true spirit of the Northwest. Intrepid members kicked off the outdoor festival season with a membership meeting and weekend jam session, featuring a lot of enthusiasm, great picking – and a bunch of vehicles stuck in the mud.

The annual meeting was held at Pendarvis Farms, site of The Pickathon and the annual OBA Pickers Festival. About 50 people attended the event, and the meeting itself attracted a number of members who volunteered to join the OBA board.

Returning board members included new president, Colby Buswell and new vice president, Patty Spencer; Dave Hausner continuing as treasurer; Larry Wilder who continues as secretary; Matt Snook, continuing as membership chair; Tony McCormick, web master; Liz Crane, who represents the Roseburg Chapter; and at-large members Fred Coates, Cleve Friedman, Ian Joel, Chuck Holloway, and Chip Russell, who stepped down as president but continues as a board member.

The new board members attended their first meeting in May. They come from a diverse background but share a common enthusiasm for bluegrass and the community it creates.

Pat Connell is a member of the Portland band Whistlin' Rufus and says he has been a member of Oregon's bluegrass scene "before there was a bluegrass scene." He's been performing since the 1970s, first in Bend and now in Portland, where he is a real estate broker. He said, "I have participated in bluegrass jams on the east side, west side and all around the town and have come to consider all the wonderful pickers in Portland as friends and family members. Joining the board is a chance to give back to the bluegrass community."

Sarah Ells lives in Southeast Portland and teaches English as a Second Language to kids from kindergarten through fifth grade. She's in two bands, Shotgun Wedding, an all-female contra dance band, and the old time band Turpentine. She writes, "I've been so impressed with the OBA from the start! I hope to help with more music performances in schools and to get kids more involved through our newsletters. By next fall, I bet my students will be submitting some poems and other artwork to the Express."

John Prunty has jumped into the role of co-editor of the OBA Express. He writes, "I was first introduced to the OBA by Ken Cartwright. I was so impressed with Ken's honest straightforward help in my search for an upright bass, that I knew the OBA must be a worthwhile organization. In real (non-bluegrass) life I'm a balding high school science teacher, so the music and the OBA allow me the alter ego of a bluegrass guitar slinger with tons of friends."

Marlene Smith has bravely taken on the role of OBA volunteer coordinator. Marlene is a registered nurse who grew up listening to country and bluegrass on the radio as a farmer's daughter in North Dakota. She writes, "I had the great experience of meeting Frank Nelson (one of the original supporters of the OBA) in 2001, and I heard about the OBA. I dug my guitar out of the closet and began to practice and even took some lessons. It took several years before I got the courage to play in jams, but it has been life changing for me. I am hoping to encourage others to support the organization and all the activities, especially the jamming."

MaryJo Turner lives in downtown Vancouver, Wash., where she sells real estate "when it doesn't get in the way of my music." She plays upright bass in the band Barnyard Ruckus, is learning guitar and writes music. She wrote, "I think the OBA is the driving force of everything bluegrass around these parts and want to encourage, empower and be inspired by all the great people and musicians involved."

Christine Weinmeister was an outdoor educator, Girl Scout song leader and campfire guitar strummer through college and after, but she is a recent convert to bluegrass. She writes, "I mostly play bass and a little guitar these days, but I have aspirations of playing fiddle and have been known to send the dog running and call a few neighborhood cats with a squeaky rendition of Angelina the Baker. I became interested in the OBA after Stevenson (the Columbia Gorge Bluegrass Festival) last year, and found an incredible community of fun, welcoming and interesting folks (Hi, Fred!) and knew it was something I wanted to be part of." As co-editor of The Express, "I'm looking forward to getting to know even more great folks from around Oregon, and would encourage anyone who has ever thought about it to go ahead and write an article for the Express!"

Jamming is fun. In the bluegrass culture jamming is the cornerstone of our musical lives. Jamming is social, fun and satisfying. It's a great way to make friends and expand your art.

You can go to any part of the United States and find a bluegrass jam. Bluegrass music is about participation and building friendships through music. Most players are authentically friendly and want to help new players progress. So use good manners and you will all get along fine.

Here are a few simple hints to ensure that you have a great time, that the music is good, and that you will be a welcome addition to a jamming circle.

Sizing up a jam

Listen to the style and type of music being played. Is it a singing jam? A fiddle tunes jam? Traditional bluegrass? New grass? Is it an old time or swing jam? Will your playing fit in? Make a judgment before you ask to join.

Listen to a song or two discreetly from outside the circle. Note which instruments are already present and decide whether you will contribute or be in the way. For example, if there is a bass in the jam and you are a bass player, move on. One bass is all that is needed.

If you are a guitar, mandolin, fiddle, banjo or dobro player, there is probably room for you even if your instrument is already represented.

Also check and make sure it is not a band practice. If it is a band practice, move on immediately. It is very distracting to have people from outside of the band at band practice.

Jam Size

Really great jams usually degrade when the census exceeds a certain number. This number is dependent upon the skills and instrumentation of the jam. It's hard to keep things running smoothly with more than ten people jamming.

Tune

Tune your instrument before approaching the jam. Unless you have perfect pitch (very few have), use an electronic tuner. Tune early and often.

Mind if I Join You?

Wait until a tune ends and then ask if you might join. Bluegrassers are a friendly bunch, so this is not much of a risk.

Listen

The first song or two should give you a good idea of how you fit in.

Listening is a key jamming skill that must be developed.

I have a very close friend that I no longer jam with. He doesn't listen to anyone else in the jam. He expects everyone else to conform to his rhythm, even when he is not leading a song. This makes group playing impossible.

Calling Out a Song

Pick a song that will fit the jam.

If it's a traditional bluegrass jam, don't choose a Neil Young song.

Above all pick a song that you know well enough to lead.

Avoid saying, "Let's do this song I like, I don't know how to play the song, or the chord progression" but let's do it anyway."

Have a couple of standard tunes under your belt and be ready to go.

Whiskey & Water

Which key (Whiskey) are we playing? What are (Water) we playing?

Don't just start playing at people and expect them to figure it out and join in. This is especially important in fiddle tunes!

When to Sing

When to sing and when not to sing are very important. If you called the tune, you are expected to sing the lead and know the words to the verses and chorus.

It is usually not a good idea to sing along with the lead singer.

Singing on the chorus is usually appropriate.

Jamming & Listening

Like knowing when to sing, knowing when and when not to play is very important. The first step is listening. On instrumental tunes led by somebody else, the rest of the circle plays rhythm. You should also play low so the lead player can be heard easily.

When singing is going on, play a quiet rhythm, never so loud that the singer can't be heard.

Breaks

Be ready when it's your turn. If you do not know the tune, if it's too fast, or you don't want to take the lead, you can pass on taking a solo break, but make sure you tell the person next to you in advance. It is very annoying if the person next to you doesn't start when it is their turn or says "pass" after the verse has started. Likewise, when it comes your turn to call a tune, be ready. Think of one ahead of time. Don't wait until the last minute.

Be Inclusive

When you are the tune caller, announce the name and key of the tune, note when everyone is ready (i.e., capos on, banjo strings in place), and set the pace with a kickoff. Then, "direct" the tune around the circle.

Be Nice

Help new players feel welcome. American music is a gift to be shared. Let's help others to learn the craft.

I. THOU SHALT TUNE THY INSTRUMENT.

Electronic tuners make this easy.

II. THOU SHALT KEEP STEADY RHYTHM.

Count beats if necessary.

III. THOU SHALT TAKE TURNS

CHOOSING SONGS.

Announce the key. Vocalists always choose their key.

IV. THOU SHALT NOT SPEED.

Start songs at a reasonable tempo.
Speed up according to abilities.

V. THOU SHALT SIGNAL WHO HAS THE SOLO.

Follow a pattern when taking solo leads.

VI. THOU SHALT LISTEN TO OTHERS.

If you can't hear the lead, consider yourself too loud.

VII. THOU SHALT WELCOME OTHERS.

Include everyone in your jam. Help everyone sound as good as they can.

VIII. THOU SHALT NOT STEAL OTHER MUSICIANS FROM AN ACTIVE JAM.

With time, players move around anyway.

IX. THOU SHALT TRY NEW MATERIAL.

Original and different tunes are OK occasionally.

X. THOU SHALT BE CONSIDERATE OF PICKERS

Explain when you're rehearsing, not jamming. Help beginners.

Three Festivals in Three Weeks: The Perfect Trip

By Chris Palmer

After a hectic year, our company slows down to a crawl in the spring. We yearned for a road trip. Just the two of us in the car, rambling wherever we felt like going. So we decided to cash in our frequent flyer miles, head for the southern U.S. and play it by ear. The timing coincided with Merlefest as a beginning and the Gettysburg Festival as the end. What we did in the middle was unplanned.

I'd always been curious about Merlefest. We'd pored over the website many times and knew the event attracted an amazing 80,000 people, that it was far from being an all-bluegrass event, but always featured a Doc Watson show. So we flew into Charlotte, rented a car and after a beautiful 87-mile drive to Wilkesboro, settled in at the local Holiday Inn Express. The lineup was the cross section expected, ranging from The Del McCoury Band and Sam Bush to The Doobie Brothers and Robert Plant's Band of Joy. But we also caught the Kruger Brothers, Michael Cleveland, Crooked Still, Wayne Henderson, The Infamous Stringdusters and many more of our favorite bands. To give an idea of the event's size: If the main stage bands had not been displayed on a giant video screen, we would have been seated too far away to see who was on stage.

While at Merlefest, we were thrilled to find out about a new festival in Galax, Virginia, 107 miles away, happening the following weekend. So, trusty GPS in hand, we leisurely headed that direction, stopping to go through the historic village of Old Salem and every antique shop on the way. Since we made this trip on a tight budget, the backseat was loaded with groceries.

Galax is the home of the 76-year-old Fiddler's Convention, but this festival turned out to be a first-year tribute to an 18-year-old banjo player named Houston Caldwell, who died in a motorcycle accident a year ago. Houstonfest was a wonderful little festival. It turned out that Houston had a lot of friends who contributed their time by performing, such as Wayne Henderson, Cherryholmes, Sierra Hull and Ron Block, Mountain Heart, the Darrell Webb Band, Larry Cordle and LST, and many others. All for $25 for the weekend. If it repeats next year, it is well worth attending. And Galax is a charming small Virginia town.

After Houstonfest we needed to make some time to get to Gettysburg by Thursday, which meant we had to blaze through the Shenandoah Valley covering at least 100 miles a day. That gave us time to stop at the Natural Bridge--20 stories of solid rock--as well as Thomas Jefferson's Monticello and the Belle Grove plantation, plus a day to lie around in a hotel room watching movies.

Then on to Gettysburg, which turned out by far to be our favorite of the three. Held in a beautiful campground, it was all bluegrass all the time with Wayne Henderson (who probably thought we were stalking him since this was the third weekend in a row that we were in the audience), Dailey & Vincent, Mountain Heart, The Seldom Scene, Dry Branch Fire Squad, J.D. Crowe, Rhonda Vincent, The Grascals, Michael Cleveland, Peter Rowan Band, Bill Emerson, Steep Canyon Rangers, David Parmley & Continental Divide and Junior Sisk. We also had the pleasure of seeing Lynn Morris, who worked the sound board during the Bill Emerson set and joined the band for one tune. Jamming in Gettysburg happens after the stage closes down at night. And unfortunately after two wonderfully sunny days, the cloud that probably followed us from Portland burst and the last two days of the festival were in the pouring rain.

Sadly, that marked the end of our perfect trip. As with the end of most vacations, we started fantasizing about retiring and cruising the country rather than facing the red-eye flight home back to real life. Unfortunately that's not in the cards for us in the near future unless we win the lottery. But we took away some great ideas for our next RiverCity festival, a really nice Bouvier mandolin which we had signed by all the great mandolin players that we encountered (Sierra, Rhonda, Darrell Web, Jody Stecher to start), which will end up as a raffle item for RiverCity. We also picked up quite a few vintage items for resale. But mostly we enjoyed each other's company for three whole weeks in a stress-free environment as we wandered through a beautiful part of our country. And we are planning next year's road trip, which will keep us sane until then.

Many are the traps along the way to ensnare the eager beginning bluegrass picker. Heed the sage advice about the dangers of tablature, and how the unwary can become mired on it, unable to stray from what's written there. Equally dangerous is to be bogged down with 'licks.' Practicing alone and without a recording can leave you unaware that you stop and interrupt the song with each mistake, only to find that while flubbing a note is unnoticeable in a jam, to stop or interrupt causes a train wreck!

I have recently encountered more than a few beginners with a different problem. They've mastered the chord fingerings and picking patterns of their instruments, but find themselves stranded on the chord shape when it comes time to improvise! For banjo players, rolling along over the chords may be an appropriate backup banjo technique, but it doesn't often produce a satisfying solo. How can the creative picker break away from just playing chords?

Figure 1. Finger the D chord by barring the A at the second fret with the Index (I) finger, then use the Ring (R), Middle (M), and Stupid, er, Little (L) fingers as shown. Now you can 'dissolve' the D chord into the A by lifting one finger at a time.

In the last column I demonstrated that every note of a scale is to be found in the relevant chords. For those familiar with the scale, this provides a new perspective or image of the keyboard. But even those not yet familiar with the scales on their instrument can use this idea to jumpstart their improvisation.

Cuckoo's Nest

The melody to Part A: for banjo with the fifth string capoed up to A

When picking out a melody, all the notes that are fair game – likely to sound good – are all the notes found in the chords of that key. For instance, if you're playing in D, not only are the notes of the D chord acceptable, but those of G, A, Bm, etc. This information is useful if you can picture those other chords on the fingerboard while you're following the chords of the song. If the banjo player is rolling over the D chord, she can break away from that safe haven by pulling in some notes from the A or G chord just a step away. One way of doing this is to dissolve one chord into another, one string at a time.

In the opening phrase of the fiddle tune Cuckoo's Nest, the song starts out in D and moves to the A chord. Our stranded picker will roll over a straight D chord, and switch to rolling over the A as the song progresses. But this doesn't even come close to sounding like the melody.

So let's try dissolving the D chord, one string at a time into that A chord. On the banjo, fret both the A chord and the D chord at the same time; this is easy if you just bar the A at the second fret, while fingering the D as in Figure 1.

In measure 17 of the tab you see a forward roll with a complete D chord, then a backward roll with just the little finger raised, leaving the first string fretted at the second fret. Then the roll is forward again, with the middle finger raised as well. The tune finally reaches the full A chord just as the banjo player lifts the ring finger to finish the phrase with a pinch. The combination of rolling and chord dissolving yields a cute, banjoistic rendition of the melody – without practicing scales!

The next two measures (19 & 20) repeat the process dissolving from C into G – and let's keep going! Measure 21 then shows a way to build a D chord one string at a time – it works both ways! A similar technique can be used just about anywhere. Don't be stranded on that safe chord! Remember, any notes from adjacent chords in the same key are fair game when picking out a melody. Reach out and grab them!

Clatskanie Bluegrass Festival

2011 Clatskanie Bluegrass Festival, Clatskanie, Oregon:
August 5th - 7th. Only 30 miles from the Oregon coast!

For the last 14 years, on the first full weekend of August, there has been a wonderful gathering of bluegrassers in the little coastal town of Clatskanie, Oregon. Well, this year it's happening again and we would like to invite you join us at the 15th annual Clatskanie Bluegrass Festival! A tradition in the Northwest, the Clatskanie Bluegrass Festival is founded, and grounded, on traditional bluegrass content. There are many bluegrass festivals all over the United States, but this event is so much more than that. It's a yearly gathering of friends and family who get together each August to celebrate bluegrass music in a family atmosphere. If you're wondering who the "family" is, remember this: if you're a bluegrass picker or grinner, you're part of the family. Not only will you get three days of great bluegrass music here, you'll also be treated to a free breakfast each morning. Pancakes, bacon and eggs are there for the taking. We gladly accept donations to help defer the cost of the breakfast, but it's by no means required. Clatskanie is a wonderful, all American, small town located approximately 35 miles east of Astoria, on Highway 30 in the beautifully green Coastal Range Mountains near the Mighty Columbia River. We love this town, and we are confident you will too. The festival is held at the Clatskanie City Park which is located at 300 NE Park Street. Directions are as follows: From highway 30 (the lower Columbia River highway). Take Nehalem Street northeast 0.2 miles to NE 5th street. Turn right (southeast). Take entrance to park (Park ST) approximately 0.1 miles. There are a very limited number of camping spaces outside the park itself, however, there is plenty of room for camping inside the park on the grass. There is electricity available on a limited basis. Camping for the event is $60/unit (Wednesday - Sunday) or, $15/day for those not coming in on Wednesday, and there is an additional charge of $25 if you use electricity. Entrance to the interior of the park will be on Wednesday morning around 10 O'Clock. On Thursday, as has become a Clatskanie tradition, there will be a cornbread cooking contest chili/corn-on-the-cob feed, so don't forget to bring your best cornbread recipe along to so if you can beat out the competition. PLEASE make plans on joining us for the 15th annual Clatskanie Bluegrass Festival!

Bill Bogan – A Trusting Heart

by Gene Bach

The world of bluegrass lost a most ardent supporter in early June: Bill Bogan.

For several years Bill fought cancer, never giving in to the thought of defeat. He lived the rest of his life the same way. A true family man, his wife and children always came first – although that devotion extended to his bluegrass family and oftentimes made it difficult to tell his blood relatives from his musical ones.

Festival promoter Bill Bogan will be missed by the bluegrass community. – photo by Cleve Friedman

Bill was a wonderful promoter of bluegrass music, producing festivals in Oregon and Arizona. He is widely known as being responsible for the popularity of bluegrass in Arizona today.

Bill was the leader of the traditional bluegrass band Trusting Heart, which played throughout Washington, Oregon, California, Arizona, Arkansas, and Tennessee. Instrumentally a mandolin player, Bill was most noted for his strong voice. When he started singing you could hear him miles away. He never gave less than one hundred percent when it came to his singing.

Bill was also an accomplished songwriter, producing a full CD of all original songs with favorites such as “Old Big Cabin Farm” and “Let Me Rest in the Shade of the Evening.”

He was a strong bluegrass traditionalist and was particularly fond of the Stanley Brothers.

An electrician by trade, Bill worked throughout California and Oregon, including doing a stint at the Trojan Nuclear Power Plant during its heyday.

He often told stories about his early days of work with the electric company in California where he was placed way out in the backcountry. In fact, his wife, Geneva, was the camp cook on one of those out-in-the-woods sites. When he talked about being out there he would light up and you firmly believed that those days were some of the best he ever spent.

Friends are one thing Bill was never short of. While he was in Clatskanie, Bill started a bluegrass festival that has run for 14 years. That event has always been a favorite among pickers everywhere, and I’m happy to say that it is going to continue in his honor (August 5 – 7, 2011).

No matter where Bill was camped, you could always count on breakfast being served on a daily basis. Bacon, eggs and pancakes were available for anybody who wanted them every day the world existed. There was never a question of whether or not it was OK to stop by for breakfast. The simple fact of the matter was, breakfast was available, and, if you wanted it, all you had to do was come and get it.

I’ve known Bill for many years, and have had the pleasure of picking rhythm guitar for him for a few. There is no doubt in my mind that Bill is upstairs, sitting in a jam with his son Brett (who passed away in 2004) and belting out some great bluegrass tunes.

Thank you for everything Bill...we’re all gonna miss you.

Hi again, everyone. Bluegrass festival season is hard upon us and I hope most of you will have an opportunity to experience some great live music this year. As I write this, I am looking forward to being at Goldendale once again (Fiddling Under the Stars Bluegrass Festival, June 24-25, 2011) and am slowly going through all my gear to make sure everything works as it should when I get there.

During a recent discussion with a bass player who had questions regarding various methods of reinforcing his bass, I tried to add up how many bluegrass musicians I encounter in a given year of running sound at festivals and recording in my studio. It turned out that well over five hundred bluegrass musicians a year put their sound in my hands. That's a lot of responsibility. It is also flattering to know how many of those musicians trust me to make them sound their best.

While sitting out in front of so many great bands, I have wondered what makes one band sound better than another. Is it their ability to play their instruments? Is it their unity as a group? What makes one band sound better and keep my attention while another group is simply "there"? They are all using the same mics, the same stage and the same sound system and most have the same mix of instruments. What separates the good from the great?

I believe the answer is something I call "Audio Charisma." It is that indefinable quality that some musicians have on stage and others don't. It can have a drastic effect on how an audience perceives the music and thus can make a band sound better, even if it has nothing whatsoever to do with playing ability. To reinforce my theory, I started looking at some well-known bluegrass musicians and bands to see what they provide in the form of Audio Charisma.

Tony Rice. He doesn't move around a lot, isn't a flashy showoff on stage, but he literally fills the stage with his presence. How can that be? I saw Sam Bush attempting to be a rock star at one show and half the audience got up and walked out. How can that be? Rhonda Vincent. No matter who in her band is taking a break, she commands the stage without trying. How can she do that?

Some of the old school great bluegrass performers seem to use their Audio Charisma more than their musical ability to capture audiences and provide highly entertaining performances. Ralph Stanley, J.D. Crowe and others fill the stage with their presence and don't have to be playing instruments at break neck speed. Just being on stage seems to be enough.

The stage presence of a performer or a band seems to have a large effect on how that person or band is perceived to sound. This should be a wakeup call for all bluegrass musicians who think all they need to do is master the art of the 32nd note lead. Without some form of stage presence, the audience may not be paying attention or even listening.

How can local and regional bands hope to create something as nebulous as stage presence and Audio Charisma? Here are a couple of tips that may help.

Look nice. Looking like you just walked in from the barn doesn't connect you to anyone except the one or two farmers in the audience. Involve your audience in your performance. That doesn't mean simply talking between songs, it means looking at everyone while you play, smiling, and looking like you are enjoying yourself. Shoe gazing is not an art form. And don't sit down. Plopping down on a chair or stool may be fine for a jam with friends, but I don't know of any popular national bluegrass bands that made it to the top by sitting down on stage.

So now you have a blueprint of how to create something that cannot be defined, is hard to explain and difficult to achieve. Pretty simple, right? It's just one more cog in the wheel of success and something important in "sounding" your best.

If you have any questions about anything involving recording, mastering, audio software, duplicating, mics, speakers or sound reinforcement, please feel free to contact me: GZsound@hotmail.com.

Floating Glass Balls

Floating Glass Ball is a band whose music is broad and pulls from many genres — bluegrass, Caribbean, contemporary, country, and swing tunes — the likes of the Stanley Brothers and the Carter Family, to name just a couple. It is reflected in what each member brings to the table. Together now for 13 years, "The Balls" can easily play four to five straight gigs without repeating a song — a testament to the depth the group has developed throughout those years playing together. They are Dan Conner on Dobro, Joel Marshall on guitar, Gar Keiski on fiddle, Peter (Spud) Siegel on mandolin and Bill Uhlig on bass.

Long Mountain Revival

Long Mountain Revival's main emphasis in the group is sharing the Gospel through song. Their song repertoire includes that of such groups as Doyle Lawson and Quicksilver, Hotrize, Nashville Bluegrass Band, Hank Williams, and other artists, as well as original music by Jon Clement. Many of the songs are very upbeat, as bluegrass music usually is, with an occasional waltz or country ballad as part of the set, to balance out the tempo and give listeners variety. Long Mountain Revival is available for church functions, outreaches, community events, and any other venue where Gospel Bluegrass music is desired.

Money Creek Bluegrass

With over 150 years combined musical experience (don't worry...individually we're not that old), Money Creek Mining Co. offers music that's enjoyable by the young and young-at-heart. These wonderful musicians not only bring a superb technical quality to their performances, but audiences appreciate their warm, down-to-earth charm. Money Creek plays a nice variety of old and newer bluegrass tunes while mixing it up with original songs, and a few top 40 tunes from the past. The band has a CD available for purchase and looks forward to providing some "hard driving" bluegrass at many more venues and events in the Puget Sound and beyond. Money Creek has its own sound system and is available for performances at festivals, concert halls, pubs and taverns, community venues, weddings and parties.

New Old Friends

New Old Friends is a "real deal" traditional bluegrass band that gets its inspiration from the major bluegrass bands from the 1940s through the 1960s, and performs its material (including some original tunes) in a way that keeps the essence of "classic" bluegrass intact. Though all play several different instruments, in New Old Friends, they have settled on the following line-up: Rollie Champe, mandolin and vocals; Chuck Davidshofer - acoustic bass and vocals.

Siskiyou Summit:

Since 1999, Siskiyou Summit has performed its special brand of bluegrass music to a growing fan base in the Pacific Northwest. The band members have decades of individual musical performance experience and benefit from each being a strong singer, instrumentalist, song writer and arranger - highly unusual for any band, especially one so geographically distanced from the origins of this uniquely American music. Siskiyou Summit members are Jeff Jones on mandolin, Glenn Freese on guitar, Bob Evoniuk on Dobro - all formerly with the entertaining bluegrass group, Foxfire - Crystal Reeves on fiddle - formerly with the national touring acoustic group, the Robin Flower Band - Sam Cuenca on upright bass, and Rick Nelson on banjo - formerly with the Rogue Valley Bluegrass Boys.

Urban Monroes

Fashioned from the heart of tradition and infused with adrenaline, the Urban Monroes' contemporary bluegrass style is an outgrowth of the combined skill of some of the Pacific Northwest's finest talent. Possessing band member credits ranging from "record of the year" and "CD of the Year" to state bluegrass instrument champions, their musical experience circles the globe having taken them as far away as England and Scotland and even to Siberia...the long way. Three of the Urban Monroes four members have been featured on the Emmy award winning television show "Oregon Art Beat" and collectively they have opened for and shared the stage with the likes of Laurie Lewis, Ricky Skaggs, Iris Dement, Lee Ann Womack, Paul Delay and others.

With Fran Kent- guitar and vocals, Matt Gray-banjo, Jason Mellow-bass and Jeff Shippy- fiddle, The Urban Monroes are a new tradition in contemporary bluegrass.

Whistlin' Rufus

The Whistlin' Rufus musicians bring a lot of experience to the stage and have roots in Classical, Irish, Folk, Bluegrass, Rock and Roll and Jazz music. When you stir it all together combining their exciting knack for arrangements, their three and four part vocal harmonies, original ballads and toe tapping fiddle tunes, well, you end up with Whistlin' Rufus. The 2009 release of the latest Whistlin' Rufus CD, "It's About Time" has won rave reviews across the country, from the "Back Porch Music Program" at the WUNC in Raleigh, to KBOO in Portland, OR. Whistlin' Rufus is just perfect for your event or Festival.

Yvonne McMillan

is the Northwest's best-kept bluegrass secret. While raising a family in a small Willamette Valley town, Yvonne developed a dedicated following of fans who only heard her sing informally at jams and gatherings. Now, with her family grown, she's ready to bring her crystal-clear voice to a wider musical audience. Yvonne is joined in SugarPine by others long admired by the close-knit bluegrass community. Matt Snook, who recently relocated to the Willamette Valley, performed on banjo, dobro and vocals in a variety of La Grande groups. Barbara Collins is one of the region's most versatile, fluid and accomplished fiddlers. Garrett Maass plays mandolin with tone and taste, enlivening several Portland bands. Steve Blanchard's guitar playing has helped make Prairie Flyer one of the Northwest's most popular - and musical - groups. SugarPine's song selection ranges from traditional bluegrass to contemporary covers and originals by Yvonne, Matt and Steve. The rich vocal blend created by Yvonne, Matt and Barbara distinguishes this band from others in the Pacific Northwest. With an instrumental ensemble that plays hard, fast and creatively, SugarPine's the whole package.
